Moneyball (2011)

Bennett Miller's adaptation of Michael Lewis' non-fiction best seller Moneyball stars Brad Pitt as Billy Beane, a one-time phenom who flamed out in the big leagues and now works as the GM for the Oakland Athletics, a franchise that's about to lose their three best players to free agency. Because the team isn't in a financial position to spend... more

CAPTAIN AMERICA

For the release of Captain America in theaters, we've put together some Fun Facts about America's most patriotic superhero.

HITLER PUNCH

In 1941, he appeared in Captain America Comics #1, on the cover of which he's depicted punching Hitler.

SUPER WHAT?

He was originally going to be named 'Super American', but that was abandoned due to the glut of heroes with 'Super' in their names.

ON-SCREEN PORTRAYALS

Mark Rolston, Rob Lowe, Brett Walker, Chris Evans

THE FIRST SHIELD

His first shield was triangular instead of round. The shape was changed after a rival publisher complained that it was too similar to their character, The Shield.

SUPER SOLDIER SERUM

It was intended to be the first in an army of super soldiers, but the inventor of the serum was killed before he could fully transcribe the formula. The process hasn't been duplicated.

HAUNTED HOLLYWOOD

MOVIE CURSES & HAUNTINGS

POLTERGEIST

Fueled by its Beth Williams' statements in interviews that real children were used during filming, many believe that deaths of prominent cast members can be blamed on a curse incurred by lingering spirits.

THE WIZARD OF OZ

An infamous urban legend surrounding this movie says that as Dorothy and her companions are singing "We're off to see the wizard" while skipping down the yellow brick road, far off in the background you can see the demise of one of the munchkins.

THE OMEN

In addition to crew members' deaths generally attributed to movie curses, this one includes a death eerily similar to the movie's description via phone glass voice.

THE EXORCIST

At least nine deaths are reportedly related to The Exorcist. In addition to an on-set fire, its release is said to have caused leprosy, illness and mental/psychiatric ailments among some moviegoers.

MOST SEEN GHOSTS IN HOLLYWOOD

Orville Hellwig, Thomas Igoe, George Reeves, Harry Houdini

Thomas Todd, Marilyn Monroe, Montgomery Clift, Rudolph Valentino

The JOHN C. REILLY Spectrum

While Reilly has been flexing his comedy chops lately, he's played a variety of roles in his career. Look at the range on this guy!
